About Savannah

From the inviting waters of the Tennessee River to the peaceful woodlands and historic sites that dot the region, Hardin County offers something to explore around every corner! Trace the growth of the county seat in Savannah's Historic District, hear the cannons boom in Shiloh National Military Park, search for treasure at the Crump Flea Market, or catch record-breaking catfish in the rich waters of Pickwick Lake- all right here in Hardin County, Tennessee.

Savannah is the county seat of Hardin County and is located in Southwest Tennessee. It is located on the Tennessee River, sits on the southern border of Tennessee, and also straddles the border separating the West and Middle grand divisions of the state. Savannah has multiple opportunities for historical exploration and education. The Tennessee River Museum and Shiloh National Military Park include information about the history of the area and artifacts that have been collected throughout. Savannah also has exceptional parks facilities that include a Veteran's Park, Tennessee Street Park, and Wayne Jerrold's Riverside Park.

Savannah is the home to the Hank Deberry Memorial Complex that is a complex of four multi-purpose fields. It was built in the early eighties and has recently been updated with state of the art lighting. It includes four fields, a picnic pavilion, and a centrally located concession stand/press box/restrooms. It has multiple options for parking and parking is free. It is also within close proximity to several local convenience stores, for last minute needs, including CVS and Walgreens.

In addition to the lodging accommodations available in the immediate area, nearby communities also have lodging. Savannah is located 32 miles from Corinth, MS and 50 miles from Florence, AL. Several of the communities around the Savannah area also have lodging options.

Hardin County is home to Hagy's Catfish Hotel, a nationally recognized, historic restaurant, and Savannah is home to the Hickory Pit, which has been featured in Southern Living magazine. Along with these restaurants, there are several franchise restaurants available in the area. Other locally owned and operated favorites include Mollie Monday's, Toll House, Outpost General Store, and River Heights Restaurant.

Savannah and Hardin County offer dining that is nationally recognized. Savannah and Hardin County also offer dining that has a local touch and is readily available. From franchise restaurants, including McDonald's, Sonic, and Pizza Hut, to locally owned restaurants, the dining options are plentiful.
